Instructions:

You only should disclose if you or your spouse/significant other have a financial relationship (within the past 12 months) with a commercial interest (e.g., a manufacturer of a pharmaceutical or medical device) that is consumed by or used on patients, and it is discussed in your presentation.

Disclosures of Relevant Financial Relationships

Although the meeting is not accredited for certified CME, the organizers made the decision to adhere to the principles and guidelines of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME), as much as possible.

Because CME activities are conducted in the public interest, it is important to assure the public that education received by physicians and other health care professionals through whom patient care decisions are made is conducted with the highest integrity, scientific objectivity and in the absence of bias. A conflict of interest exists when individuals have both a financial relationship with a commercial interest and the opportunity to affect the content of CME about the product or services of that commercial interest. Although the meeting is not accredited for certified the CME, the organizers made the decision to adhere to the principles and guidelines of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME), as much as possible.

Criteria for Disclosure of Relevant Financial Relationships

Anyone in control of content of a CME activity are required to disclose any financial relationships or relationships to products or devices they have with commercial interests/manufacturers associated with or discussed in their presentation of any amount over the past 12 months ONLY.

A commercial interest is defined as any entity producing, marketing, re-selling, or distributing health care goods or services consumed by, or used on, patients. The ACCME does not consider providers of clinical service directly to patients to be commercial interests.

Financial Relationships: Financial relationships are those relationships in which the individual benefits by receiving a salary, royalty, intellectual property rights, consulting fee, honoraria, ownership interest (e.g., stocks, stock options or other ownership interest, excluding diversified mutual funds), or other financial benefit. Financial benefits are usually associated with roles such as employment, management position, independent contractor (including contracted research), consulting, speaking and teaching, membership on advisory committees or review panels, board membership, and other activities from which remuneration is received, or expected. ACCME considers relationships of the person involved in the CME activity to include financial relationships of a spouse or partner.
